When Penda was in high school, she used to write in a beautiful kente cloth covered journal. Her mother chose that journal because it had her favorite colors: orange and green. Penda filled the journal with so much of her life, the pages were worn and seasoned with my tears.

When she was in college, after a moment of shame, Penda ripped the journal, page by page into small, unrecognizable shreds up because she didn't want to admit that she had so many moments of regret .

As a Scribe Coach, Penda does not want anyone to be ashamed of their story. She advocates for people to record their rite of passage moments. Her coaching services focus on:

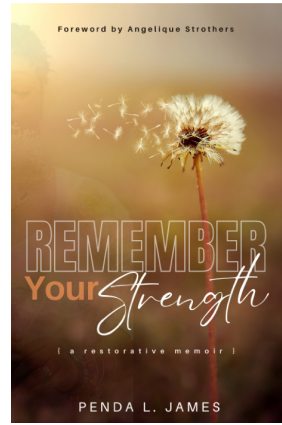

- Book Writing
- Podcast Development
- Writer's Block

With over 30 years of writing and coaching experience and a personal understanding of writer's block, Penda's services designs her to meet individual needs and writing goals. Working with her, 75% of her clients finish their books within six months.

Penda's personal mission is to help people embody resilience and write their story.
